

A Program for Parents with Infants
MOVIES & ME
FIRST TUESDAY OF THE MONTH
10:00 a.m.
CAMINO REAL CINEMAS - GOLETA

Parents

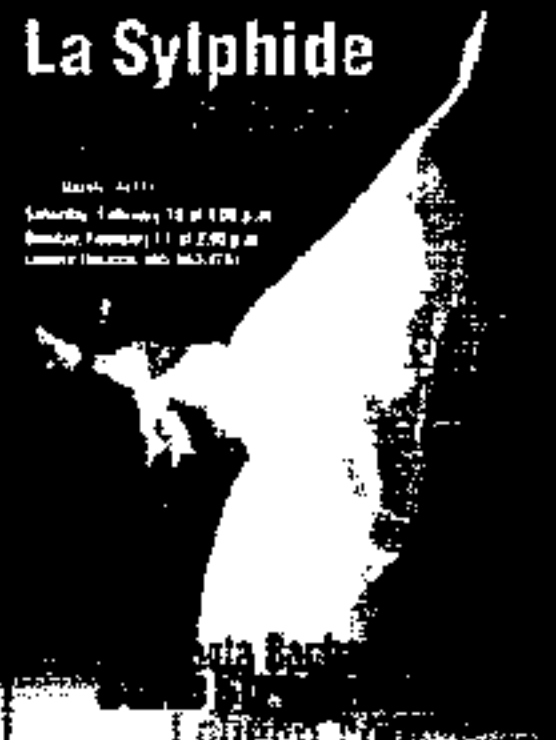

- Tired of staying home with the baby or kids?
- Not comfortable leaving your baby with a sitter?
- Can't get a sitter - or afford one?
- Don't want to disrupt others in the theatre with a small baby?
- Want to enjoy a movie knowing everyone in the theatre is OK with your infant(s)?

Movies for adults, subscriptions, and Camino Real Cinemas will be playing our first film - Leviathan - on a small and comfortable baby room to see it clearly. Regular Member Priority Seating. Movie - 10:00 - 11:00 a.m.

La Sylphide

March 4-11

Saturday, February 12 at 10:00 p.m.
 Sunday, February 13 at 2:00 p.m.
 Lower Level, 400-403, 47A

Opera House

Book Nook

The Call to Brilliance

Resa Steindel Brown is director of the Home Independent Study Program for the Los Angeles Unified School District in Southern California and has been an educator for over 38 years. Her new book, The Call to Brilliance, shares her experience and insights as both mother and educator. It has quickly earned the praise of legendary authors and public speakers William Glasser, M.D., Joseph Chilton Pearce, Jack Canfield, John Taylor Gatto and many more noted authors, parents and educators.

"This book is nothing less than a blueprint to bring life back to our increasingly moribund educational system and to our society which has lost its way," says John Taylor Gatto, author of Dumbing Us Down and The Underground History of American Education. Fredric Steindel of Fredric Press, says "When we first decided to publish Resa's book, I was not aware of how completely and utterly moved people would be. After hearing story after story from parents and teachers explaining how The Call to Brilliance truly inspired them and gave them hope for a better education for their children, I became completely convinced that this book was more than just an inspirational book, but a necessity for every parent and every teacher."

More than best-selling authors are praising The Call to Brilliance. Word of Resa's book is spreading through the Montessori community. "As head of school, I decided to give all my teachers a copy to read over the holidays. Resa has captured the 'missing piece' in almost all educational methodologies. Without passion, life is a barren existence," says Karen Hill, administrator of Montessori School of Anderson, South Carolina. Kellie Stanley, the director of Eagle Montessori, Idaho says "I not only loved this book and bought a copy for each of our schools, I highly recommend The Call to Brilliance for parents, educators and administrators. This was a book I wish I would have read when my children were young."

Resa will be featured at the Keybee Montessori exhibit, official sponsor of the Association Montessori International Centennial Conference in San Francisco on February 17. She will also be featured at the Keybee Montessori exhibit, official sponsor of the American Montessori Society Centennial Conference in New York on March 3. (Address conference inquiries to www.keybeeonline.com/conferences.)

The Call to Brilliance ($17.95) was ranked #1 on Amazon.com Best Seller list for New and Future Releases in Parenting & Family/Education. It is now available at your favorite local bookstore, the Keybee Montessori Catalogue at www.keybeeonline.com, Amazon.com and the author's own web site at www.TheCalltoBrilliance.com